

This data represents all the degrees of the people within Donald Trump's business and social network. While there are more people in his network than what is shown, this is still a good visualization because it shows all the important people and the significance of the degrees. This visualization can demonstrate how beliefs and ideas continue to evolve and reoccur because Donald Trump is connected to so many people, that he is able to spread his beliefs or pass on ideas from other people. There was no text with this data but if there were we could do a deeper analysis to look at how these connections came about and why they are important.

This is a similar chart, but it shows relative data about who is the most influential in this network. This is more powerful than the one above because it shows who the most important people really are, and who else can provide the most connections. For a real-world situation, this would be important to visualize so we can see who could possibly be the best help for getting one message to another person. For a deeper analysis, we could look at how these people became influential within this certain network. Both of these charts help better my understanding of the social network of Donald Trump, and who is most influential as well.
